BIO

A gut-punch-heart-squeeze feeling—that's what comes to mind when describing the sound of indie-pop artist, goodheart.

From early on, goodheart was writing songs and translating her world into sound. During university, she began to produce and perform her songs alongside friends in Toronto, and went on to receive Factor's Artist Development grant in 2022 and Ontario Art Council's grant in 2024. She has since garnered over 55k streams on Spotify and over 145k views on YouTube. Her sound has been described as "an abundance of beautiful pop licks, heart-beating rolling drums and soaring vocals all wrapped up in an immaculate production" (podcart).

As goodheart fell in love with producing, she started to realize the little representation women have as producers. Growing up an avid music listener, she didn't see many women who actively produced their own songs, along with writing them. Believing that song writing is a cathartic approach to fleshing out feelings, but that it's producing that gives the song shape, goodheart strives to be known as a singer, songwriter and producer – capturing honesty and heart through fresh and familiar sounds.

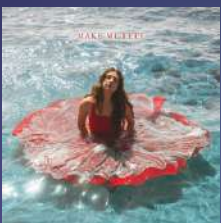

PRESS

"One of the most impressive aspects of goodheart's music is her ability to produce her tracks. In an industry where women are underrepresented as producers, goodheart's commitment to being known for her hand in both writing and producing is commendable."
